Portraits of a Connected Neighbourhood

Sharing a photograph is an easy way to talk about an idea or tell a story. Photographs capture moments of beauty and the abundance of the communities around us. By exploring citizens' stories, photographs and experiences, Project CLIC: Creating Liveable and Interactive Communities was driven to create more welcoming and inclusive neighbourhoods, one 'clic' at a time.

On October 4, 2013, 22 people came together to share pizza and talk about the project. Each person was paired with a partner and given a disposable camera, a list of suggestions and a 'photo story' form on which to record their experiences. Over the course of two weeks, each photojournalist chose four topics from the list of questions and took 12 photographs. Once completed, they passed the camera to their photo buddy, so they in turn could shoot their photographs. The list of suggestions included 'something that makes you laugh', 'a place you love to go', 'something you would love to learn more about' and 'what this community needs'.

Two weeks later all of the photographers and their guests were invited to a dinner to view the photographs and share their stories. In small groups, people discussed the prints and contemplated how they reflect upon our community and the experiences of our neighbours. The conversation was lively and emotional and helped the participants get to know one another better in a supportive space.

Project CLIC was animated by Little Mountain Neighbourhood House, with support from Vancity, Fresh Slice Pizza, ABCD Vancouver and the citizens of Mount Pleasant.

An Abundance of Sharing

Sharing Abundance is a weekly lunch program hosted at St. Andrew's United Church that builds community around food. People experience such a warm welcome at the Sharing Abundance lunch that they immediately feel part of the family. Alice experienced this warmth when she stopped by one day and it keeps her coming back every week.

Alice has many reasons for offering her gifts at Sharing Abundance. "It's nice for people to come together and eat so they aren't sitting at home alone," she says. One of her favourite things about volunteering at St. Andrew's is making connections and talking with new friends. She enjoys meeting new people and the opportunity to cook and prepare food for the community. Every Thursday, you can count on Alice to pour you a warm cup of coffee or tea and start a friendly chat.

Lunches are served every Thursday, 11:50 am - 12:50 pm at St Andrew's United Church in North Vancouver. To learn more about Sharing Abundance, visit www.sharingabundance.ca.

Waves of Hospitality

"Business should be part of and build community." These are the inspiring words of Joon Yoo, manager of Waves Coffee House at 2588 Main Street. Passersby may have noticed the funky vertical tables outside the cafe. The idea was masterminded by Joon when he wondered how he could better serve the many cyclists who pass by the coffee house each day. During his research, he came upon the innovative biking tables used in Amsterdam and Tokyo. As part of his goal to build and grow community, Joon hopes the tables will bring cyclists together and provide a convenient stop for them on their travels.

A book exchange library has recently popped up in the corner of the café, so you can read and exchange books while you savour your coffee! Stop by soon and enjoy the warm hospitality spreading from Waves Coffee House.
